Researchers.

Do you want to work in the cutting edge of political research with the chance to delve deep into policies or events of your choosing? Are you looking to gain valuable experience to pursue a career in politics, research or journalism? If so, the opportunity to be a Researcher at the European Institute of Research (EIR) is the role for you.

We're recruiting a committed team of Researchers who are serious about drilling down into the causes and effects of policies and political events to put EIR at the forefront of original, independent research.

Your responsibilities will include:

- Completing research projects assigned to you by the Head of Research, producing work of the highest standard and meeting deadlines.
- Collaborating effectively with fellow Researchers on larger joint research projects, such as opinion polling.
- You will also be expected to proactively propose research projects on topics of your choosing.

Desirable:

- Evidence of a keen interest in politics, research and/or journalism.
- Support EIR's mission to promote independent research and to engage young people in politics.
